CAM chairman Tom Finlay addresses the 2013 Awards dinner / Le président du au dîner de remise des prix 2013

Chairman's Message/Message du président du conseil

WE HAVE JUST wrapped up our major events of the year – our annual conference, annual awards dinner and annual general meeting. By the feedback we've received so far, I'm pleased to report that all were huge successes that resulted in some major steps forward in CAM's evolution.

For the first time in over twenty years, CAM's conference was held in Vancouver! We planned it this way to coordinate with the International Association of Movers' annual meeting being held there. Our turnout was very strong with lots of members from western Canada attending who have never been to a CAM conference before. We also had representation from several IAM members who came to find out what CAM was all about. It was great to meet all of these new folks.

Our awards dinner also had a great turnout to celebrate the special achievements of a few folks in our industry. You can read more about the awards on page 23. Among them was Ted LeLacheur who, a year-and-a-half into his appointment as CAM's Chairman, was forced to step down for health reasons. Ted received a service award for his dedication to his role and his tremendous commitment to the furtherance of CAM's objectives. When I assumed the Chairman's role in June, membership was growing, the partnership with the Canadian Federation of Independent Business was underway and finances were strong – and I personally thank Ted for handing over the affairs of the Association in such good order. If you've been following our newsletters, you know that Ted was also CAM's primary representative in the discussions with the Federal Government concerning their Household Goods Moving Services contract. The Government heard our concerns, expressed on behalf of the moving industry, and has embraced them into their process. Thanks, Ted, and we all wish you a speedy recovery!

Our annual general meeting was a particularly important one for CAM. In 2013, a major project was completed to comply with the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act. CAM was obliged to write new by-laws and board regulations which were just presented to and ratified by the membership at the AGM.

Looking forward to 2014, I see a few challenges for the Association on the horizon. I will be working hard to showcase CAM's value to reputable movers across Canada and recruit them as members. We will be working with Canada's media to communicate CAM's mes-

NOUS VENONS juste de compléter nos activités majeures de l'année – notre conférence annuelle, notre dîner annuel de remise des prix et notre assemblée générale annuelle. Grâce aux commentaires déjà reçus, je suis heureux de vous informer que toutes ces activités ont connu un énorme succès à la source d'étapes importantes dans l'évolution de l'ACD.

Pour la première fois en plus de vingt ans, la conférence de l'ACD se tenait à Vancouver! Nous l'avons ainsi planifiée afin de la coordonner avec la réunion annuelle de l'Association Internationale des Déménageurs qui s'y tenait. Le taux de participation fut très élevé alors que beaucoup de membres de l'ouest du pays n'ayant jamais participé à une conférence de l'ACD avant y ont assisté. Nous avions également une représentation de plusieurs membres de l'IAM qui sont venus constater ce qu'était l'ACD. Ce fut fort intéressant de rencontrer tous ces nouveaux venus.

Notre dîner annuel a également bénéficié d'un taux élevé de participation afin de célébrer les accomplissements spéciaux de quelques membres de notre industrie. Vous pouvez en lire plus à propos de ces prix à la page 23. Parmi ceux-ci se retrouvait Ted LeLacheur qui, dix-huit mois après son élection à titre de président du Conseil, fut dans l'obligation de se retirer pour raisons de santé. Ted a reçu un prix pour son implication dans son rôle ainsi que pour son engagement exceptionnel dans la réalisation des objectifs de l'ACD. Lorsque j'ai accepté le poste de président en juin, le taux d'inscription des membres était en croissance, le partenariat avec la Fédération canadienne de l'entreprise indépendante était en développement et les finances étaient en très bonne santé – et j'en remercie Ted personnellement pour m'avoir confié les affaires de l'Association dans de si bonnes conditions. Si vous avez suivi nos infolettres, vous savez que Ted était également un de nos représentants officiels dans les discussions en rapport avec le contrat de déménagement d'articles de ménage avec le gouvernement canadien. Le gouvernement a bien compris nos préoccupations, exprimées au nom de l'industrie du déménagement et les a intégrées dans son processus. Merci Ted et nous te souhaitons tous un prompt rétablissement!

Notre assemblée générale annuelle fut particulièrement importante pour l'ACD. En 2013, un projet important a été complété afin de nous conformer à la Loi canadienne sur les organisations à but non lucratif. L'ACD était dans l'obligation d'écrire de nouveaux règlements et de nouvelles règles de conduite pour le conseil d'administration

President's Message/Message du président

I F I MAY, I'd like to draw upon a forensic analogy to describe the role of CAM's national office. If the membership is the body of the Association, then the Board of Directors and CAM's committees act as the brain that sets the direction for the Association. The national office is the heart that acts on the brain's instructions to communicate with the members, media, industry colleagues, government agencies, and consumers; implement board and committees' policies and plans; and manage the Association's business affairs.

During the past year, our board and committees have been generating a wealth of initiatives in the interest of CAM's members and the industry as a whole – and we've been trying to deliver them.

CAM's partnership with the Canadian Federation of Independent Business (CFIB) to bring CAM members into the Federation was launched early this year and is now well underway. Sixty-four CAM members are CFIB members who are now benefitting from its lobbying capabilities and business-specific resources, such as banking rates, credit card charges, general business advice and improved business operations. The agreement significantly reduces the CFIB fees for CAM members – and the savings generated by CFIB membership more than offset the membership fees of CFIB and CAM combined.

Over the past few years, CAM has been working hard to market its members as reputable and professional businesses that don't deliver the shady services of its rogue counterparts. Towards this end, we've implemented a new complaints-resolution process that urges members to adequately deal with complaints – to avoid lost sales time, staff resources and reputation.

We've also been trying to promote CAM as the voice of the Canadian moving industry to consumers, governments and international associations. For example, we've been urging consumers to query their prospective mover's credentials before hiring them, to ensure that they meet the same high standards as CAM members and are not rogues presenting themselves as movers. We've recently been involved in media exposés about shady businesses cheating customers. And a considerable effort was expended this year participating in industry-wide and individual meetings with the Federal Government voicing the industry's concerns that the proposed government contract was not workable – an exercise that has resulted in some success in improving the contract for the industry.

In the last few months, we've also been working

S I VOUS LE PERMETTEZ, j'aimerais tracer une analogie médico-légale pour décrire le rôle du bureau national de l'ACD. Si les membres représentent le corps de l'Association, alors le conseil d'administration et les divers comités de l'ACD agissent comme le cerveau qui établit la direction prise par l'Association. Le bureau national en est le cœur qui agit selon les instructions du cerveau pour communiquer avec les membres, les médias, les collègues de l'industrie, les agences gouvernementales et les consommateurs; mettre en place les politiques et les plans du conseil d'administration et des comités; et gérer les affaires courantes de l'Association.

Dans la dernière année, notre conseil d'administration et nos comités ont généré une multitude d'initiatives dans l'intérêt des membres de l'ACD et de l'industrie dans son ensemble – et nous nous sommes efforcés de les mettre en place.

Le partenariat de l'ACD avec la Fédération canadienne de l'entreprise indépendante (FCEI) permettant d'inclure les membres de l'ACD dans la Fédération a été introduit tôt dans l'année et est maintenant bien établi. Soixante-quatre membres de l'ACD sont des membres de la FCEI bénéficiant dorénavant de ses capacités de lobbyiste et de ses ressources spécifiques au monde des affaires telles des taux bancaires, des frais de carte de crédit, des conseils d'affaires en général et des opérations commerciales améliorées. Cette entente réduit significativement les frais d'adhésion à la FCEI pour les membres de l'ACD – et les économies réalisées par les membres de la FCEI compensent suffisamment à la fois pour les frais d'adhésion combinés à la FCEI et à l'ACD.

Au cours des dernières années, l'ACD a travaillé activement pour promouvoir ses membres à titre de compagnies réputées et professionnelles qui font plus que d'offrir les services louches proposés par leurs homologues peu recommandables. À cette fin, nous avons mis en place un nouveau processus de résolution des plaintes qui requiert que nos membres agissent adéquatement avec toutes les plaintes reçues – afin d'éviter des pertes de temps, une utilisation exagérée de leur personnel ressource et de protéger leur réputation.

Nous nous sommes aussi efforcés de promouvoir l'ACD comme la voix de l'industrie canadienne du déménagement auprès des consommateurs, du gouvernement et des associations internationales. Par exemple, nous avons incité les consommateurs à bien s'informer sur les compétences des déménageurs potentiels avant de les embauser to fulfill the requirements of the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act. CAM now has new bylaws and board regulations that formalize its legal requirements as an Association and the processes used by the board of directors to govern it. I'd like to extend a special thanks to the CFIB for providing us with a lot of valuable information that saved CAM thousands of dollars and helped us produce excellent, workable documents.

Two years ago, CAM introduced members to Move for Hunger. This is an organization that collects unwanted food at the time of moving and sends it to local food banks. Please support this organization and help your local charities!

We are always looking for ways to get Canadian movers more engaged in CAM. Call us if you have suggestions.

John Levi

cher, de s'assurer qu'ils répondent aux mêmes normes élevées que les membres de l'ACD et qu'ils ne se présentent pas cavalièrement comme des déménageurs réputés. Nous avons récemment été impliqués dans des reportages des médias au sujet de compagnies louches se permettant de flouer leurs clients. Et un effort appréciable a été réalisé cette année afin de participer à des rencontres générales de l'industrie et individuelles avec le gouvernement fédéral afin d'exprimer les préoccupations de l'industrie quant au fait que le contrat gouvernemental actuellement à l'étude n'était pas approprié – un exercice ayant connu un certain succès afin d'améliorer tangiblement les modalités du contrat pour l'industrie.

Nous avons également travaillé afin de nous conformer à toutes les exigences de la Loi canadienne sur les organisations à but non lucratif. L'ACD détient maintenant de nouveaux règlements et de nouvelles règles de conduite pour le conseil d'administration répondant aux exigences légales requises pour une association ainsi que les processus utilisés par le conseil d'administration pour les régir. J'aimerais exprimer un remerciement spécial à la FCEI qui nous a fourni beaucoup d'informations utiles, ce qui a permis à l'ACD d'épargner des milliers de dollars et également de produire d'excellents documents de travail.

Il y a deux ans, l'ACD introduisait les membres à « Move for Hunger ». C'est une organisation qui procède à la collecte de la nourriture non désirée lors d'un déménagement et qui l'achemine à des banques alimentaires locales. S'il vous plaît, supportez cette organisation et aidez vos organismes de charité locaux!

Nous recherchons toujours des façons d'impliquer plus activement les déménageurs canadiens dans l'ACD. Contactez-nous si vous avez des suggestions.

Mackie Moving — Family Trucking Roots

By Ray Kehoe

From humble beginnings, Mackie Moving Systems has grown to become a major success and landmark in the Durham Region.

Trucking has been in the Mackie blood since the '20s.

YOU CAN'T THINK ABOUT the trucking industry in Durham Region, just east of Toronto, without including Mackie Moving Systems. In 2013, Mackie is celebrating its 85th anniversary. From humble beginnings, the company has grown to become a major success and landmark in the area.

Trucking has been in the Mackie blood since the '20s. Charles "Charlie" Mackie settled in Port Perry, Ont., a small town northeast of Toronto in 1928. Charlie bought a new Gotfredson truck to haul cattle to the Toronto stockyards, as well as hauling tomatoes to Campbell Soup Company, also in Toronto. A few years later, Charlie moved the family to Oshawa, where the current Mackie Moving Systems' headquarters is located. And with that, a trucking family was born.

In 1934, Charlie's son Merle jumped into the cab of a new Ford tractor and trailer. Merle and his wife Marie moved their family to Trout Creek, Ont., which was a day's drive from Oshawa. Today, you're looking at about a three-and-a-half-hour drive, but back then the roads were not covered in asphalt. Merle used the Ford to haul lumber from Trout Creek back south to Oshawa. Understanding how to make extra cash, instead of hauling empty trailers back north, he filled them up with produce to sell to the local Trout Creek grocery stores. Later that year, Marie gave birth to their only son, Ross and two years later, their daughter, Marilyn.

In the 1940s, the economy area drew Merle back to Oshawa. He took a chance coming back south, buying three more trucks to work hauling for a local company called Defence Industries, which produced ammunition and bombs during World War II. After the war, Merle started moving houses and buildings to clear the way to build the 401 Highway through Oshawa. Today, the 401 is North America's busiest highway and one of the widest and busiest in the world. Once the highway was completed and that job ended, Merle needed to find another way to keep the trucks on the road, so he bought Armstrong Moving, a small local competitor. Merle officially entered the residential moving business when he acquired a new moving van, a small 1948 Chevrolet tractor and a 28-foot trailer. This move gave Mackie Moving the first step to gain a solid foothold in the industry.

In December of 1951, Merle sent Ross out on his first cross-country haul, going from Oshawa to Whitehorse in the Yukon Territory. Ross endured several days and nights of sub-minus-40-degree temperatures, but found it an exceptional experience. Back then, there was no Trans Canada Highway, and roughly 1,200 miles of dirt roads between Edmonton, Alta. and Whitehorse. The trip lasted about a month, and with that, Ross was hooked.

In 1952, Merle was approached by North American Van Lines to become an agent. North American was one of the world's largest trucking companies. Over the years, it was owned by PepsiCo and Norfolk Southern; later, it merged with Allied Van Lines, a great move to continue company growth and a move that panned out exceptionally well for Mackie Moving, as over 60 years later, it is the longest-standing North American agent that is still family-owned and -operated.

In 1961, the company built a new, large warehouse on Bloor Street in Oshawa. It was a huge financial commitment – and risk – but one that paid off in spades. In an effort to gain exposure from the busy 401 Highway (to which Bloor Street is adjacent), Merle purchased a Douglas Invader B26 plane and mounted it on the warehouse's roof. The B26, which was in service during the Korean War, become “the” landmark in Oshawa along the 401 corridor.

While Ross would go on to spend several years behind the wheel of various tractors, driving coast-to-coast runs in both Canada and the U.S., his sister Marilyn became quite involved in running the office's day-to-day operations. Today, she still plays an active role in the household department, where she quotes moves from her office in the Bloor Street headquarters.

Soon, Merle brought Ross into the office and off the road. Ross became educated in all other aspects of the business, including dispatch, warehouse operations and sales. Being located in Oshawa, Merle tried with all his might to get in with neighbouring General Motors, but to no avail. So he sent Ross over to do his magic. Scared but excited, Ross bought a new suit and gave it his best shot. After a few meetings, Ross did earn the GM business the only way he knows how, through friendship and superior customer service. Ross had no idea how important this relationship would later become.

Ross and his wife Diana had four boys: Norm, Paul, Dean and Scott. When they all became of age, they started in the business, washing equipment and preparing it for the drivers before they left. Before long, they were moving the tractors around the yard. Shortly after completing school, they each started local runs and then longer hauls, eventually becoming owner/operators.

Being the savvy businessman Ross was – and is to this day – he ventured into hauling electronics, store fixtures and automobiles for various local companies. In the late '70s, he started Mackie Transport, which achieved instant growth and success in the commercial hauling industry.

*Merle Mackie (in rear), 1920s/
Merle Mackie (à l'arrière), années 20*

Now, back to General Motors: In the late '80s, Ross and son Paul met with GM to discuss outsourcing, something done frequently in the U.S. at that time, but not in Canada. The result was Mackie Automotive Systems, which made small chrome strips in the fascia of the Chevy Lumina. The company started with five employees and shared warehouse space with the moving company. By 1986, it had expanded to a newly built 125,000-square-foot warehouse – the same building that houses Mackie's headquarters today. The outsourcing operation took Mackie to Detroit, Dallas, Atlanta, Oklahoma City and Arlington, Texas, as well as England, Germany and Poland.

Mackie Automotive also did a joint-venture project in Detroit. The company was called Trumack and was a sub-assembly plant for U.S. postal trucks and recreational vehicles. Today, the company is known as Detroit Chassis. During its time, Mackie Automotive also sequenced and sub-assembled parts for Ford and Paccar. By this time, Mackie employed several hundreds of employees and owned over 500 trucks and trailers. In 1999, Ross and the boys sold Mackie Automotive to Chase Manhattan and put their entire focus back on Mackie Moving Systems.

Along with trucking, Ross found another motorized love: Harley-Davidson motorcycles. Ross fell in love with and purchased a 1997 Softail Heritage Classic. To this day, Ross owns and rides it. So in 2003, during Harley-Davidson's 100th anniversary, the Mackie family broadened their horizons and turned their enthusiasm for Harley-Davidsons into an exciting new business opportunity. And so became Mackie Harley-Davidson. The dealership, located directly across the 401 Highway from Mackie Moving's headquarters, became an instant success. With its strong leadership, experienced management and team of professional staff, it is one of Deeley Harley-Davidson's premier dealerships in Canada. Today, Ross, Norm, Paul, Dean and Scott all regularly enjoy riding their Harleys.

When talking to Ross, it's easy to see the enthusiasm he still has today for Mackie Moving, Mackie Harley-Davidson and business in general. He has a wealth of knowledge and many stories to go along with the history of the businesses. It's so easy to spend hours just listening to him. Today, not only are Ross and Marilyn still part of the business, all four of Ross's boys, along with several grandchildren, play integral roles at Mackie Moving Systems. Having been thrown out of school and told by his grade 8 teacher that he'd probably be a failure, it turned out that two grandchildren of that teacher would go on to work for Ross. There's something to be said about karma! When asked to sum up his 78 years, Ross simply says: "It's been one hell of a ride!"

Mackie Moving — Des racines familiales dans le camionnage

Par Ray Kehoe

Depuis ses humbles débuts, Mackie Moving Systems s'est développée pour connaître un succès grandissant et devenir une référence dans la région de Durham.

Le camionnage est dans le sang de Mackie depuis les années 20.

VOUS NE POUVEZ PARLER de l'industrie du camionnage dans la région de Durham, à l'est de Toronto, sans penser à Mackie Moving Systems. En 2013, Mackie célèbre son 85<sup>ième</sup> anniversaire. Depuis ses humbles débuts, la compagnie s'est développée pour connaître un succès grandissant et devenir une référence dans la région.

Le camionnage est dans le sang de Mackie depuis les années 20. Charles "Charlie" Mackie s'installa en 1928 à Port Perry en Ontario, petite ville au nord-est de Toronto. Charlie acheta un nouveau camion Gotfredson pour transporter des animaux aux parcs à bétail de Toronto ainsi que pour effectuer le transport des tomates pour la compagnie Les Soupes Campbell, également à Toronto. Quelques années plus tard, Charlie déménagea sa famille à Oshawa, où le siège social de l'actuelle Mackie Moving Systems se trouve aujourd'hui. Et avec ce changement, une compagnie familiale naquit.

En 1934, le fils de Charlie, Merle, embarqua dans la cabine d'un nouveau camion Ford tirant une remorque. Merle et sa femme Marie déménagèrent avec leur famille à Trout Creek en Ontario, située à une journée de route d'Oshawa. Aujourd'hui, vous devez conduire environ 3 heures et demi, mais à l'époque, les routes n'étaient pas recouvertes d'asphalte. Merle utilisait son Ford pour transporter du bois de Trout Creek vers Oshawa au Sud. Sachant bien comment faire plus d'argent, plutôt que de revenir vers le nord à vide, il remplissait le camion avec des produits pour les vendre aux épiciers locaux. Plus tard dans l'année, Marie donna naissance à leur fils unique Ross et 2 années plus tard, à leur fille Marilyn.

Dans les années 1940, en raison de l'économie, Merle revint à Oshawa. Il prit une chance en revenant vers le sud où il acheta 3 camions supplémentaires pour effectuer du transport pour une compagnie locale nommée

Ross Mackie's 1954 Kenworth tractor-trailer and 1952 Chevrolet pickup/

Defence Industries qui produisait des munitions et des bombes durant la Seconde Guerre Mondiale. Après la guerre, Merle commençât à déménager des maisons et des édifices afin de dégager la voie pour construire l'autoroute 401 jusqu'à Oshawa. Aujourd'hui, l'autoroute 401 est la plus achalandée en Amérique du Nord et l'une des plus grandes et des plus achalandées au monde. Une fois l'autoroute complétée et son travail terminé, Merle avait besoin d'une autre alternative pour garder ses camions sur la route. C'est à ce moment qu'il acheta Armstrong Moving, un petit compétiteur local. Merle entra officiellement dans l'industrie du déménagement résidentiel quand il acheta un nouveau camion de déménagement, un petit camion Chevrolet 1948 avec une remorque de 28 pieds. Cette initiative fut la première étape pour permettre à Mackie Moving de s'impliquer solidement dans l'industrie.

En décembre 1951, Merle envoya Ross sur son premier transport pan-canadien, de Oshawa à Whitehorse dans le territoire du Yukon. Ross supportât plusieurs jours et nuits au-dessous de 40 degrés mais ce fut pour lui une expérience exceptionnelle. À l'époque, il n'y avait pas d'autoroute Transcanadienne, donc entre Edmonton, Alberta et Whitehorse, il y avait 1 200 miles de route de gravier. Le voyage dura environ un mois, mais suite à cela, Ross devint un passionné.

En 1952, Merle fut approché par North American Van Lines afin de devenir agent. North American était l'une des plus grosses entreprises de camionnage au monde. Au fil des ans, Elle fut la propriété de PepsiCo et de Norfolk Southern; plus tard, elle fusionna avec Allied Van Lines, une excellente stratégie pour poursuivre la croissance de la compagnie et qui s'avéra exceptionnellement fructueuse pour Mackie Moving, puisque 60 ans après, elle est le plus ancien agent en Amérique du Nord, toujours détenue et opérée par une famille.

En 1961, la compagnie a érigé un nouvel entrepôt, plus grand, sur la rue Bloor à Oshawa. C'était un énorme engagement financier – et un risque – mais qui s'avéra par la suite des plus rentables. Afin d'être aperçu de l'autoroute 401 très achalandée (à laquelle la rue Bloor est adjacente), Merle acheta un avion Douglas Invader B26 qu'il plaça sur le toit de son entrepôt. Le B26, en service durant la guerre de Corée, devint "le" point de repère à Oshawa, le long du corridor de la 401.

Tandis que Ross allait passer plusieurs années derrière le volant de différents tracteurs routiers, allant d'un océan à l'autre au Canada et aux États-Unis, sa sœur Marilyn s'impliqua beaucoup dans la direction des opérations quotidiennes du bureau. Aujourd'hui, elle joue encore un rôle actif dans le secteur domiciliaire, où elle prépare des soumissions de déménagement à partir du bureau-chef de la rue Bloor.

Rapidement, Merle amena Ross au bureau, loin de la route. Ross fut formé dans tous les autres domaines de l'entreprise, incluant la répartition, les opérations d'entreposage et les ventes. Étant localisé à Oshawa, Merle tenta par tous les moyens de s'entendre avec une entreprise voisine, la General Motors, mais en vain. C'est alors qu'il y envoya Ross afin que sa magie puisse opérer. Craintif mais emballé, Ross s'acheta un nouveau costume et tenta le tout pour le tout. Après quelques rencontres, Ross réussit à décrocher le contrat de GM de la seule façon qu'il connaissait, grâce à ses relations amicales et à son service à la clientèle supérieur. Ross n'avait alors aucune idée de l'importance que prendrait par la suite cette relation d'affaires.

Ross et sa femme Diana ont eu quatre garçons: Norm, Paul, Dean et Scott. Lorsqu'ils furent tous suffisamment âgés, ils débutèrent dans l'entreprise en nettoyant l'équipement et en le préparant pour les chauffeurs avant leur départ. Peu de temps après, ils déplaçaient les camions remorques dans la cour. Après avoir complété leur scolarité, ils commencèrent chacun à effectuer des transports locaux puis des transports plus éloignés, devenant par la suite des propriétaires opérateurs.

Ross, brillant homme d'affaires qu'il était – et qu'il est toujours – s'aventura dans le transport des produits électroniques, des équipements de magasin et des automobiles pour différentes compagnies locales. À la fin des années 70, il démarra Mackie Transport qui connut beaucoup de succès et bénéficia d'une croissance instantanée dans l'industrie du transport commercial.

Revenons maintenant à General Motors : À la fin des années 80, Ross et son fils Paul rencontrèrent la GM pour discuter d'approvisionnement externe, quelque chose de courant aux États-Unis à l'époque, mais pas au Canada. Le résultat fut Mackie Automotive Systems qui fabriquait de petites pièces chromées utilisées à l'avant de la Chevy Lumina. La compagnie commença avec cinq employés et partageait l'espace d'entreposage avec la compagnie de déménagement. En 1986, elle procéda à une expansion dans un tout nouvel entrepôt de 125,000 pieds carrés – le même qui abrite aujourd'hui le bureau-chef de Mackie. L'exploitation de fournitures externes amena Mackie à Détroit, Dallas, Atlanta, Oklahoma City et Arlington au Texas ainsi qu'en Angleterre, en Allemagne et en Pologne.

Mackie Automotive participa aussi à un projet en partenariat à Détroit. La compagnie s'appelait Trumack et possédait une usine de préassemblage de camions postaux américains et de véhicules récréatifs. Aujourd'hui, la compagnie s'appelle Detroit Chassis. À cette époque, Mackie Automotive approvisionnait et préassemblait des pièces également pour Ford et Paccar. À ce moment-là, Mackie employait plusieurs centaines de personnes et possédait plus de 500 camions et remorques. En 1999, Ross et ses garçons vendirent Mackie Automotive à Chase Manhattan et se concentrèrent à nouveau sur Mackie Moving Systems.

De pair avec le camionnage, Ross développa un autre coup de cœur motorisé : les motociclettes Harley-Davidson. Ross tomba en amour avec une Softail Heritage Classic 1997 qu'il acheta. Encore aujourd'hui, Ross la possède toujours et la conduit encore. C'est pourquoi, en 2003, lors du 100<sup>ième</sup> anniversaire de Harley-Davidson, la famille Mackie élargit ses horizons et transforma son enthousiasme pour les Harley-Davidson en une intéressante opportunité d'affaires. Et ce fut ainsi que naquit Mackie Harley-Davidson. Le détaillant, situé en face du bureau-chef de Mackie Moving, sur l'autoroute 401, connut un succès immédiat. Grâce à son excellent leadership, à une équipe de gestion expérimentée et à une équipe de professionnels, elle est devenue l'un des plus importants concessionnaires Deeley Harley-Davidson au Canada. Aujourd'hui encore, Ross, Norm, Paul, Dean et Scott adorent conduire régulièrement leur Harley.

Lorsque l'on parle avec Ross, on perçoit facilement l'enthousiasme qu'il a toujours pour Mackie Moving, Mackie Harley-Davidson et les affaires en général. Il possède de vastes connaissances et connaît plusieurs anecdotes associées à l'his-toire de ses entreprises. C'est tellement facile de passer des heures à l'écouter. Aujourd'hui, non seulement Ross et Marilyn sont-ils encore impliqués dans l'entreprise, mais les quatre garçons de Ross ainsi que plusieurs petits-enfants tiennent des rôles importants chez Mackie Moving Systems. Ayant été expulsé de l'école après que son enseignant de huitième année lui eut dit qu'il n'aurait probablement jamais de succès, il s'avéra par la suite que deux petits-enfants de cet enseignant travaillèrent pour Ross. Cela en dit beaucoup sur le karma! Lorsqu'on lui demande de faire un résumé de ses 78 ans, Ross dit simplement : "Ce fut toute une épopée!"

qui furent présentés et ratifiés par les membres lors de l'AGA.

En examinant les perspectives pour 2014, j'entrevois quelques défis à l'horizon pour l'Association. Je m'efforcerai de démontrer l'importance de l'ACD à des déménageurs réputés, partout au Canada, et à les recruter à titre de membres. Nous travaillerons de pair avec les médias canadiens afin de communiquer le message de professionnalisme et d'éthique de l'ACD aux consommateurs canadiens. Nous mettrons en force le code d'éthique et les principes d'affaires supportés par l'ACD dans nos activités de recrutement des membres – afin de mettre de l'avant les meilleures qualités de nos membres et d'offrir les meilleurs services possibles à nos clients.

Et, bien sûr, toutes les activités et les accomplissements de l'ACD ne peuvent être réalisés que grâce aux efforts conjugués des membres du conseil d'administration de l'ACD, ses comités en place et son personnel. Merci à tous de me supporter dans mon nouveau rôle de président du conseil et j'anticipe avec plaisir de pouvoir travailler avec les membres au cours des deux prochaines années.

CFIB – An Important Asset for Movers and a Friend to Small Business

By Rob Wilson

Protecting Canadian small businesses and helping them succeed have been top priorities for CFIB since it opened its doors in 1971.

THIS YEAR, CAM is making it easy for its members to access the many benefits that the Canadian Federation of Independent Business (CFIB) offers at a discounted rate. CFIB partners with expert service providers to offer its Privilege Programs and offers a variety of services that can ultimately reduce costs and have a big impact on your bottom line.

CFIB is the big voice for small businesses, representing the interests of the small business community to all three levels of government. With 109,000 independent business members across the country, it fights for the small business community, advocating for lower taxes and less red tape that impact all business owners. Over the last year, CFIB successfully advocated for a three-year freeze on Employment Insurance premiums for employers and employees, as well as new rules for credit-card-processing contracts.

Protecting Canadian small businesses and helping them succeed have been top priorities for CFIB since it opened its doors in 1971. From fighting the expansion of the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) to addressing a growing labour shortage for small businesses – both issues that hit home for the moving industry – CFIB works hard to make sure we're represented at the table.

Members have access to business-critical information and expertise at no additional cost through teams of Business Resource Counsellors, located in every province. The type of advice offered ranges from issues related to regulatory requirements on all levels of government, right up to human resources issues such as drafting letters of engagement, employment contracts and complying with labour legislation, to name a few. Many members turn to the CFIB Business Resources team as their informal HR department.

Every business owner knows that efficient operations mean a healthier bottom line. The cost of doing business for smaller operations, however, can be burdensome, especially when it comes to essentials like credit/debit card processing, banking, payroll or insurance. While large businesses have the economy of scale to negotiate preferred contracts, smaller companies often end up paying top dollar for even the most basic service. CFIB, however, can reduce costs by leveraging the power of its 109,000 members and national profile to establish key partnerships and the best rates for various services.

CAM members who are also CFIB members have already realized significant bottom line savings from participating in their Privilege Programs. In fact, the savings have paid for their CAM memberships and more!

If you aren't currently a CFIB member, we urge you to join and gain access to the many benefits available to your business. For more information, call CAM's contact at CFIB, at 1-800-667-3436 ext. 241, or visit www.cfib.ca/cammembers. A local CFIB District Manager will also be in touch with CAM members to review how CFIB membership can benefit your bottom line.

FCEI — Un actif important pour les déménageurs et l'amie des PME

Par Rob Wilson

Depuis ses débuts en 1971, les priorités principales de la FCEI ont été de protéger les PME canadiennes et de les aider à connaître du succès.

CETTE ANNÉE, l'Association Canadienne des Déménageurs (ACD) facilite la tâche à ses membres pour leur permettre d'accéder aux bénéfices multiples qu'offre la Fédération Canadienne de l'Entreprise Indépendante (FCEI) à un tarif réduit. LA FCEI s'associe à des fournisseurs de services d'expertise pour offrir ses Programmes Privilège ainsi qu'une variété de services vous permettant de réduire vos coûts et d'avoir un impact significatif sur vos bénéfices.

La FCEI est la voix puissante des PME qui représente les intérêts de l'ensemble des PME auprès des trois paliers gouvernementaux. Avec 109,000 membres d'affaires indépendants d'un océan à l'autre, elle se bat pour les PME, préconisant la réduction des taxes et du fardeau bureaucratique auxquels doivent faire face tous les propriétaires d'entreprises. Dans la dernière année, la FCEI a plaidé avec succès pour un gel de 3 ans des primes d'assurance-emploi pour les employeurs et les employés ainsi que pour l'obtention de nouvelles règles relatives aux ententes de traitement des cartes de crédit.

Depuis ses débuts en 1971, les priorités principales de la FCEI ont été de protéger les PME canadiennes et de les aider à connaître du succès. Qu'il s'agisse de mener le combat contre l'expansion du Régime de pensions du Canada (RPC) ou de s'attaquer au manque croissant de la main-d'œuvre disponible pour les petites entreprises – deux problématiques touchant directement l'industrie du déménagement – la FCEI travaille activement à assurer que nous soyons bien représentés à ces tables de discussion.

Ses membres ont accès à toute l'information essentielle aux entreprises et à son expertise sans frais additionnel par l'entremise de son équipe de conseillers aux entreprises se retrouvant dans chaque province. Les types de conseils dispensés vont des problématiques relatives aux exigences réglementaires à tous les niveaux de gouvernement jusqu'aux problèmes de ressources humaines tels que développer des lettres d'embauche et des contrats d'emploi en conformité avec les lois du travail pour n'en nommer que quelques-uns. Plusieurs de ses membres utilisent l'équipe de conseillers aux entreprises de la FCEI à titre de département officieux des ressources humaines.

Chaque propriétaire d'entreprise sait que des opérations efficaces se traduisent par une meilleure santé financière. Mais, les dépenses d'exploitation pour les plus petites entreprises peuvent être un fardeau, spécialement lorsqu'elles ont trait à des éléments essentiels tels le traitement des cartes de crédit/débit, les frais bancaires, les salaires ou l'assurance. Tandis que les grandes entreprises bénéficient d'économies d'échelle pour négocier des ententes privilégiées, les PME se retrouvent souvent à payer le maximum pour de simples services de base. La FCEI, cependant, peut réduire ces coûts en tirant parti de la représentativité de ses 109,000 membres ainsi que de son profil national afin de forger des partenariats clés et de proposer les meilleurs tarifs possibles pour des services variés.

Les membres de l'ACD, également membres de la FCEI, ont déjà réalisé des épargnes nettes importantes en participant à ses Programmes Privilège. En fait, ces épargnes ont compensé les frais d'adhésion à l'ACD et encore plus!

Si vous n'êtes pas actuellement membre de la FCEI, nous vous enjoignons d'y adhérer et de bénéficier d'un accès aux différents bénéfices offerts aux entreprises comme la vôtre. Pour plus d'information, contactez Rob Wilson, la personne-ressource de l'ACD à la FCEI, au 1-800-667-3436, poste 241, ou en visitant le www.cfib.ca/cammembers. Un gérant de district local de la FCEI contactera également les membres de l'ACD afin de regarder comment l'adhésion à la FCEI pourrait influencer positivement sur vos bénéfices.

It's Time!

By Alan R. Jobe

Cashing out a broken item and leaving that item in the customer's possession may be resolving the claim, but it is not truly erasing the damage that is left in the customer's view.

A N ON-GOING ISSUE that we are facing in our industry, and it doesn't appear to be getting any better, is the decision to cash out damaged items versus having repairs done (when possible). This started out for a long list of reasons, but one main driving force was a desire to resolve a claim as quickly as possible with the false assumption that the customer was satisfied sooner. Couple that with the current element of society that is looking for instant gratification, and you start a snowball effect. Unfortunately, once something starts rolling and many are accepting it as common practice, it is very hard to slow it down or reverse it. Plus, no one wants to be the bad guy and deal with the backlash from the customer base.

After talking with many different individuals, including some that I value as key players in our industry, I do believe it is possible to slow this trend down and get things back on track to where we are making the customer "whole" the right way. Simply cashing them out and marking that claim off the pending list is not making our customers whole and it is not righting the wrong in many cases. Cashing out a broken item and leaving that item in the customer's possession may be resolving the claim, but it is not truly erasing the damage that is left in the customer's view.

Most of us have heard about the scenario of the customer telling everyone they know about the damage to their furniture when someone walks into their home. The course of action in the past was to get that item repaired as soon as possible, so that the customer does not have the damage to show and can instead tell how lovely their furniture looks and that their claim was properly resolved.

I acknowledge that a lot of furniture today is different in quality and considered disposable. I acknowledge that many customers' schedules are quite hectic and the day of the stay-at-home spouse is past. I also acknowledge that sometimes it may seem easier for everyone to just pay the customer, write it off as what the customer wants and move on to the next claim in what seems like a never ending pile.

But I don't accept that it should be what is often considered the norm in today's claim processing. We must get away from the numbers game and get back to true customer service. We must get away from the mind set to process a claim quickly, believing that we are doing what is best for all and that we have serviced the account with great processing-time records. We need to refocus on what is truly the right thing to do in each situation and then use our skills of customer service to explain and follow through with that plan. We know from experience that a customer is not always accepting of plans of action when things have gone wrong. So if it is easier to throw cash at them, we often take the easier route. But that does not mean it is the right answer.

I would like to see our industry take a step back and refocus on what is truly best for the customer and the long-term image of the carrier, then do the right thing through good customer service.

We have the tools in our service providers, our seasoned adjusters and our claims personnel. We just need to agree that this should be the priority so we can educate the new generation and our carrier accounts that speed in resolution of a claim is only good if the end result is the best answer. Cashing out is not resolving the claim the day after the cash arrives if the customer has to view the damaged furniture day after day. A better result is making the customer happy that their furniture is whole again.

If we start with this re-education of why it is so very important to make the customer whole by making repairs first, when possible, we will improve our industry's overall reputation – and we will also sustain our repair industry. And it is done by doing the right thing and not simply pushing the damage under the cover of cash-outs to make the claim appear resolved on the books.

I know this is not something that can happen overnight. The trend to cash and run did not evolve overnight either. But we can fix it if we get the attention of the right people and if, as an industry, we are willing to make the effort to sell good customer service.

C'est le temps!

Par Alan R. Jobe

Rembourser un item brisé et laisser cet item au client va peut-être régler la réclamation, mais ceci n'efface pas totalement le dommage causé au client.

UN PROBLÈME RÉCURRENT auquel nous sommes confrontés dans notre industrie, et il ne semble pas que ça s'améliore, est la décision de rembourser les items endommagés plutôt que de les faire réparer (lorsque c'est possible). Ceci a commencé pour une longue liste de raisons, mais un des motifs principaux était le désir de solutionner une réclamation dès que possible sous la fausse prémisse que le client était satisfait plus rapidement. Associez ceci au fait que les intervenants de la société actuelle recherchent constamment une gratification instantanée et vous vous retrouvez avec un effet boule de neige. Malheureusement, une fois que quelque chose est en marche et que beaucoup de personnes acceptent ce fait comme une pratique normale, il est très difficile de ralentir cette tendance ou de la renverser. De plus, personne ne veut être le mauvais garçon ni être celui qui devra faire face à l'opposition de la clientèle.

Après avoir discuté avec plusieurs personnes, y compris des gens que je considère comme des joueurs clés de notre industrie, je crois qu'il est possible de ralentir cette tendance et de revenir à une situation où le client obtient une contrepartie satisfaisante. Le fait de simplement rembourser les clients et de retirer cette réclamation de la liste en suspend ne satisfait pas entièrement nos clients et ne remédie pas totalement aux torts causés dans beaucoup de cas. Rembourser un item brisé et laisser cet item au client va peut-être régler la réclamation, mais ceci n'efface pas totalement le dommage causé au client.

Plusieurs d'entre nous ont entendu parler du scénario d'un client qui dit à tout le monde qu'il sait à propos du dommage causé à son mobilier lorsque ceux-ci viennent à la maison. Auparavant, la solution envisagée était de faire réparer cet item dès que possible afin que le client n'ait aucun dommage à montrer et qu'il puisse plutôt être satisfait de l'état de son mobilier et dire à tous que sa réclamation a été correctement résolue.

Je comprends que, de nos jours, beaucoup de meubles sont de qualité variable et sont considérés comme pouvant être facilement remplaçables. Je comprends que les horaires de beaucoup de clients sont très chargés et que le temps des épouses à la maison est passé. Je comprends aussi que, parfois, il peut sembler plus facile à tous de simplement payer le client, de donner au client ce qu'il veut pour régler la réclamation et passer aux réclamations suivantes tandis que la pile de celles-ci semblent sans fin.

Mais, je n'accepte pas que ceci doit être toujours considéré comme la norme relativement au processus de réclamation de nos jours. Nous devons nous éloigner de ce jeu de chiffres et revenir à un véritable service à la clientèle. Nous devons nous éloigner de cet état d'esprit de traiter une réclamation rapidement, en croyant que ce que nous faisons est dans le meilleur intérêt de tous et que nous avons bien répondu aux besoins de ce compte dans un temps de traitement adéquat. Nous devons nous recentrer sur ce qui est vraiment la bonne chose à faire dans chaque situation et, par la suite, utiliser nos aptitudes de service à la clientèle pour expliquer et poursuivre avec la solution mise en place.

Nous savons par expérience qu'un client n'accepte pas toujours nos plans d'action lorsque les choses ont

Two Weeks of Movers' Conferences

By John Levi

OCTOBER 2013 seemed to be an incredibly busy time for conferences in the moving industry. CAM had the opportunity to host one and participate in three between October 4 and 19:

- Great Canadian Van Lines (October 4)
- Canadian Association of Movers (October 4–6)
- International Association of Movers (October 7–10)

Deux semaines de conférences pour l'Association

Par John Levi

OCTOBRE 2013 a été une période des plus propices aux conférences dans l'industrie du déménagement. L'ACD a eu l'opportunité d'en organiser une et de participer à trois autres entre le 4 et le 19 octobre :

- Great Canadian Van Lines (4 octobre)
- Association canadienne des déménageurs (4–6 octobre)
- International Association of Movers (7–10 octobre)

mal tourné. Alors, même si c'est plus facile de les compenser avec de l'argent, nous prenons souvent la voie facile. Mais, ça ne signifie pas que c'est la bonne solution.

J'aimerais voir notre industrie prendre un peu de recul et se recentrer sur ce qui est vraiment le mieux pour le client et pour l'image à long terme du transporteur, puis d'effectuer ce qui est la bonne chose à faire grâce à un bon niveau de service à la clientèle. Nous possédons les outils avec nos fournisseurs de services, nos experts en sinistres saisonniers et notre personnel affecté aux réclamations. Nous n'avons qu'à accepter d'en faire une priorité afin de pouvoir inculquer à la nouvelle génération et à nos transporteurs qu'un traitement accéléré d'une réclamation est la bonne chose à faire seulement si le résultat final est la meilleure réponse possible. Un remboursement ne solutionne pas la réclamation du jour au lendemain après que le client ait reçu son argent si celui-ci continue à voir le mobilier endommagé jour après jour. Un meilleur résultat serait de satisfaire le client en s'assurant de remettre son mobilier dans son état antérieur.

Si nous commençons par cette rééducation consistant à déterminer pourquoi il est tellement important de satisfaire le client en réparant son mobilier en premier lieu, lorsque c'est possible, nous améliorerons grandement la réputation globale de notre industrie – et nous supporterons également l'industrie du secteur des réparations. Et ceci s'accomplit en faisant la bonne chose et non en camouflant le dommage encouru par le biais de remboursements qui ne font qu'indiquer que la réclamation semble avoir été résolue dans les livres.

Je sais que ce n'est pas une chose qui arrivera du jour au lendemain. La tendance de rembourser et de s'en laver les mains ne s'est pas établie du jour au lendemain. Mais nous pouvons y remédier si nous obtenons l'attention des bonnes personnes et si, à titre d'industrie, nous sommes intéressés à faire l'effort de vendre un bon service à la clientèle.

- Atlas Van Lines (Canada) (October 16–19)

I had the privilege of speaking at the first three and participating as an exhibitor in the fourth. In all, it was a great opportunity to reach out to various segments of our industry. The experience brought home the fact that our industry is one that's held together by relationships, and networking is the only way to develop those connections.

Each one of the conferences had a different feeling to it, and each allowed CAM to present its message in one form or another.

There are a few key take-aways for our Association from these

- Atlas Van Lines (Canada) (16–19 octobre)

J'ai eu le privilège d'être un conférencier aux trois premières et de participer à titre d'exposant à la quatrième. Globalement, ce fut une excellente opportunité de rejoindre différents segments de notre industrie. L'expérience nous a permis de revenir avec le constat que notre industrie en est une qui s'est développée par ses relations d'affaires et que le réseautage est la seule façon de développer ces contacts.

Chacune des conférences avait ses particularités et chacune d'elles a permis à l'ACD de présenter son message sous une forme ou l'autre.

experiences. We found out that we could hold successful conferences outside the Toronto area. While the highest member representation is found in Southern Ontario, our members both inside and outside of Ontario are clearly enthusiastic about gathering at a venue outside the Toronto area. Attendance was 50% higher than expected, the awards dinner was well-attended and there was great traffic for exhibitors. We learned that panel discussions provide an excellent information resource for attendees. The connection that CAM had developed over the years with the American Moving and Storage Association (AMSA), British Association of Removers (BAR) and International Association of Movers (IAM) was evident in our participation in moving-industry-association panel discussions at both the CAM and IAM conferences. We need to continue to use and foster these relationships.

And as always, the IAM annual meeting was spectacular. The Vancouver Trade & Convention Centres were great venues for their 1,800 attendees.

Atlas Van Lines' 50th anniversary convention was characterized by its enthusiastic delegates, great speeches and speakers, and first-rate entertainment. The recognition that CAM received at the event was invaluable in establishing the Association's credibility.

I had the opportunity to share some ideas about the value of CAM membership with GCVL's agents. There are the benefits that CAM brings to the mover, but also the benefits to the moving industry that participation in the association brings.

But, of course, I felt that CAM's annual conference was the jewel in the crown. Our members connect easily with each other, are supportive of our supplier members and are committed to our Association, its public image and its goals.

All in all, the value of relationships and networking was brought home time and again. Join us at CAM's annual conference in 2014!

Notre association a quelques leçons à retenir de ces expériences. Nous avons constaté que nous pouvions organiser avec succès des conférences à l'extérieur de la région de Toronto. Bien que la plus forte représentation de nos membres soit dans le sud de l'Ontario, nos membres de l'Ontario et hors de cette province sont très enthousiastes quant à un rassemblement à une activité hors de la région de Toronto. Le taux de participation a été 50% supérieur à nos attentes, le dîner de remise des prix a connu un grand succès et nos exposants ont connu un excellent achalandage. Nous avons appris que les discussions de groupe fournissent une excellente source d'information aux participants. Les relations développées au cours des années par l'ACD avec l'American Moving and Storage Association (AMSA), la British Association of Removers (BAR) et l'International Association of Movers (IAM) étaient évidentes lors de nos participations dans les discussions de groupe sur le déménagement, l'industrie et l'association organisées aux conférences de l'ACD et de l'IAM. Nous devons continuer d'utiliser et de renforcer ces relations.

Et comme toujours, la rencontre annuelle de l'IAM fut spectaculaire. Les Centres du commerce et des congrès de Vancouver étaient d'excellents sites pour les 1800 participants.

Le congrès du 50<sup>ème</sup> anniversaire d'Atlas Van Lines a été marqué par ses délégués enthousiastes, des présentations et des conférenciers d'excellente qualité et un divertissement de grande classe. La reconnaissance obtenue par l'ACD à cet événement était d'une valeur inestimable afin de bien établir la crédibilité de l'association.

J'ai eu l'opportunité de partager quelques idées sur la valeur d'une adhésion à l'ACD avec des agents de GCVL. Il y a les bénéfices que l'ACD peut amener au déménageur, mais également les bénéfices que cette participation à l'association apporte à l'industrie du déménagement. Mais, bien sûr, j'ai bien constaté que la conférence annuelle de l'ACD était le fleuron parmi toutes ces conférences. Nos membres établissent facilement des contacts entre eux, soutiennent bien nos membres fournisseurs et sont dédiés à notre association, son image et ses buts.

Globalement, la valeur des relations et du réseautage a été bien démontrée à maintes reprises. Joignez-vous à nous à la conférence annuelle de l'ACD en 2014!
