Chairman's Message/Message du président du conseil

IN AN EFFORT to keep up with the ever-changing times, CAM has continued to plough ahead to help members secure their share of the marketplace and to curtail the negative impact created by the rogue movers. Last year, I mentioned in conjunction with our theme of “The Year of the Reputable Mover” that we had reached out to government bodies across Canada but the response from them was weak. The results of our actions in 2014, however, are now showing signs of success.

The Ontario Ministry of Government and Consumer Services is leading the way for other provinces by tackling the issue of rogue movers head-on. Ministry representatives have been meeting with CAM to share ideas on how to promote good household goods moving practices and they've surveyed our members, non-members and consumers on moving practices in Ontario. Their findings will be used to develop strategies to better protect and educate consumers. It is our hope that Ontario's actions will set the precedent for the other provinces in Canada – and this could have a huge impact on our industry.

Our theme for this year's conference in Ottawa on November 1st to 3rd is “Better Partnerships for Better Business” and, for the first time in recent history, the Minister of Government and Consumer Services will be a speaker. The Honourable David Oraziotti will launch our event with a few remarks about the interface between residential moving and consumer protection. Make sure you attend this unique event for the Canadian moving industry and hear what the professionals have to say about our future.

Currently our marketing & internet committee is working on creating a strategic business plan for the Association for the next three years. Not only will it establish where we want to grow but also how we get there. It will not only combine our collective thoughts with the changing times but, in conjunction with our Mission Statement, provide realistic goals.

By the time you receive your copy of this magazine, CAM will have migrated its current web site to a new platform that will provide you and our consumers with more tools to find information and access professional movers both domestically and internationally. Our education committee has been re-activated and, within the next 60 days, you will see a more up-to-date Canadian Professional Mover course online.

The planning of our annual golf tournament on September 14 and our conference in November is well-

DANS LE BUT de s'adapter à un environnement en constante évolution, l'ACD poursuit ses efforts afin d'aider ses membres à développer leurs parts de marché et à minimiser les effets négatifs créés par les déménageurs sans scrupules. L'an dernier, de pair avec notre thème sur «L'année du déménageur reconnu», je vous avais mentionné que nous avons effectué de multiples démarches relatives à ce sujet auprès des agences gouvernementales canadiennes mais que les diverses réponses reçues avaient généralement été mitigées. Cependant, les résultats de toutes nos actions mises en place en 2014 démontrent maintenant des signes de succès.

Le Ministère des services gouvernementaux et des services aux consommateurs de l'Ontario ouvre la voie en ce sens aux autres provinces en s'attaquant directement au problème des déménageurs sans scrupules. Des représentants du ministère ont eu une rencontre avec l'ACD afin de partager des idées sur les façons de promouvoir de bonnes pratiques en matière de déménagement des biens ménagers et ils ont effectué un sondage auprès de nos membres et de non-membres ainsi qu'auprès des consommateurs sur les pratiques courantes en matière de déménagement en Ontario. Leurs constatations serviront à développer des stratégies permettant de mieux protéger et de mieux éduquer les consommateurs. Nous souhaitons fortement que ces actions du gouvernement de l'Ontario contribueront ainsi à établir un précédent pour les autres provinces canadiennes – et ceci pourrait avoir un impact significatif sur notre industrie.

Notre thème de la conférence de cette année qui se tiendra à Ottawa du 1^{er} au 3 novembre est «De meilleurs partenariats pour un meilleur environnement d'affaires» et, pour la première fois depuis des années, le Ministre des services gouvernementaux et des services aux consommateurs de l'Ontario y participera à titre de conférencier. L'honorable David Oraziotti ouvrira notre conférence en partageant quelques observations en rapport avec les relations entre l'industrie canadienne du déménagement et la protection des consommateurs. Assurez-vous d'assister à cette événement unique pour l'industrie canadienne du déménagement et ainsi découvrir ce que des professionnels ont à dire à propos de notre futur.

Notre comité sur le marketing & Internet travaille présentement au développement d'un plan d'affaires stratégique triennal pour l'Association. Non seulement servira-t-il à déterminer les orientations à privilégier en

President's Message/Message du président

THIS is my first message as your new President. I am working very hard to fill the huge void created on John Levi's retirement and I have been in touch with a number of you already – to meet you and find out what the Association can do for you.

My mandate, as I see it, is to grow the Association and continue to provide more value-added programs to our repertoire. I believe that, since we are all part of the same moving and storage industry in Canada, by working together, we can enhance our ability to lobby with our governments for the betterment of the industry. In addition, the sharing of ideas and growth through new members can only strengthen us.

Already this year, we've established some new partnerships in the Association. Just recently, we added the Van Line Presidents to our Board of Directors. We also just entered into a five-year partnership with GPS Consulting Group & Insurance Agencies Inc. to provide you with a full range of employee benefit programs. You will be hearing more about this in the near future and at our annual conference in November. Our Board of Directors also just agreed to open a dialogue with B2B Credit Chex, Inc. which provides commercial and consumer credit check information to the marketplace, both domestically and internationally. A partnership with B2B could result in reduced costs for CAM members by as much as 20 percent. This is just the start of what I hope will be many new programs to come.

Our annual conference will be held at the Ottawa Marriott Hotel on Kent St in Ottawa, Ontario on November 1st through 3rd. In keeping with our Association's agenda – to promote the reputable mover – and also in keeping with this year's convention theme, "Better Partnerships for Better Business", the Ontario Minister of Government and Consumer Services will be our first keynote speaker on the Monday morning. It is our hope that actions taken by Ontario in dealing with rogue movers will spill over into the other provinces in Canada. On Monday afternoon, David Bradley, current President and CEO of both the Ontario Trucking Association and the Canadian Trucking Alliance, will comment on challenges in the trucking industry.

We'll also be holding our annual golf tournament on September 14, 2015 at the Royal Ontario Golf Club in Hornby (Milton), Ontario.

Both of these events will provide all of our members – movers and suppliers – with opportunities to meet, re-

L S'AGIT de mon premier message à titre de nouveau président. Je travaille énormément à combler l'immense vide créé par le départ à la retraite de John Levi et j'ai déjà eu l'occasion de communiquer avec beaucoup d'entre vous – dans le but de pouvoir rencontrer les membres et découvrir ce que l'Association peut faire pour vous.

Mon mandat, tel que je le conçois, est de développer l'Association et de continuer à offrir encore plus de programmes à valeur ajoutée à notre éventail de bénéficiaires. Puisque nous faisons tous partie de la même industrie du déménagement et de l'entreposage, je crois qu'en travaillant tous ensemble, nous pouvons améliorer notre capacité de lobbying auprès des divers paliers de gouvernements pour le bénéfice de l'industrie. De plus, le partage de nos idées et notre croissance par l'ajout de nouveaux membres ne peuvent que contribuer à nous fortifier.

Déjà cette année, nous avons établi de nouveaux partenariats dans l'Association. Tout récemment, nous avons accueilli des présidents d'entreprises de transport dans notre Conseil d'administration. Nous avons également initié un partenariat de cinq ans avec GPS Consulting Group & Insurance Agencies Inc. dans le but de vous offrir une variété complète de programmes d'avantages sociaux pour les employés. Vous en saurez plus à ce sujet dans un proche avenir ainsi qu'à notre conférence annuelle de novembre prochain. Notre Conseil d'administration s'est récemment mis d'accord afin d'entreprendre des discussions avec B2B Credit Chex, Inc. qui offre aux entreprises des informations sur la vérification de crédit des consommateurs ainsi que sur la vérification de crédit commercial. Un partenariat avec B2B pourrait générer jusqu'à 20 pour cent de réduction de coûts pour les membres de l'ACD. J'espère bien que ce n'est là que le début de plusieurs nouveaux programmes à venir.

Notre conférence annuelle se tiendra au Ottawa Marriott Hotel, situé sur Kent St à Ottawa en Ontario, du 1^{er} au 3 novembre. Conformément à l'agenda de notre Association – de faire la promotion des déménageurs hautement professionnels – ainsi qu'au thème de la conférence de cette année, «De meilleurs partenariats pour un meilleur environnement d'affaires», le Ministre des services gouvernementaux et des services aux consommateurs de l'Ontario sera notre premier conférencier dès le lundi matin. Nous espérons grandement que les actions mises en place par l'Ontario dans le but de solutionner la problématique liée aux déménageurs frauduleux auront des répercussions dans les autres provinces canadiennes.

Is Moving Still a Man's World?

By Kim Biggar

THIS ARTICLE is about four women who joined the moving industry through family connections, some at least a little reluctantly. However they joined, they've stayed because they like where they are, and they've advanced thanks to their skills, knowledge and leadership.

Being in senior management in this industry is still relatively uncommon for women. We wanted to know what women think is required to succeed in moving – because this was, after all, predominantly a man's world for many years – but imagine that their answers are pretty typical of what anyone in the industry would say nowadays.

Anne Martin, President of United Van Lines (Canada) Ltd., had just returned to Toronto from Calgary, newly divorced and with a baby, when she joined United, intending to stay for a year or two. Her father headed the company at that time and for a total of 37 years. Martin is quick to point out that she was qualified for the role she was hired for in training, with previous experience in that area. Instead of leaving after a short stint, she progressed through positions in training, marketing, quality management and customer account management. Because United is not a family business, Martin never assumed she would advance to take over when her father retired. In fact, although she applied for the job upon his retirement, she was not chosen. Two years later, when her father's replacement was terminated, she applied again and got the job.

Betty Shields is VP at Fred Guy Moving & Storage Ltd. and Parkway Van Lines. (Both companies are owned by the Lyttle family.) She was training to be a teacher, and worked summers for her late brother Don Lyttle's moving company. Like Martin, Shields didn't plan to be in the moving industry, and when she joined, she didn't anticipate that she'd make her career in the field.

Similarly, Brenda Naylor, owner of TR Westcan Inc./Tippet-Richardson, had worked as an environmental consultant and had almost joined the police academy when she was asked by her brother to join the Vancouver office of the family-owned company started by her grandfather and his brother, Basil Tippet and C.A. Richardson. Had her eyesight been better, Naylor would have been accepted into the academy, and would likely have had a quite different career. She broke barriers at T-R by being the first female operations manager, then general manager, followed by vice-president and up to her current role as president and CEO.

Carly LaPorte, General Manager of LaPorte Moving & Storage Systems Limited, is the only one of these four women who expected to enter the moving business. In fact, she started working for the family company established by her grandparents when she was about 10 years old and never worked elsewhere.

For LaPorte, always encouraged to join the family company, being female in a male-dominated industry has never been an issue. For the others, though, overcoming some gender prejudice has come with the job. "In a male-dominated industry, I had to make a mark," says Martin. She went about doing that by gaining as much experience in the industry as she could, by participating in the Canadian Association of Movers and the Canadian Employee Relocation Council, broadening her networks and knowledge, and volunteering on committees and for projects. Traveling and being seen was definitely part of a strategy for her to build a reputation in the industry.

Naylor says it took a long time for her to be taken seriously in the industry. Not only was she "a woman in a man's world," she says, she also struggled with the perception that she was given her various successive roles, rather than earning them. She "worked twice as long and hard" to dispel that perception, and was paid less than her counterparts in the company, despite her family connection. Naylor estimates that the industry still comprises 90 percent men, although she believes that percentage is decreasing. "Women in operations and dispatch need to be really strong," she says, to handle the lingering bias against women in those roles.

When Shields started in the industry, she was one of just a couple of women at her company. Although she recognized the male-oriented nature of the moving industry at that time, it didn't have a direct effect on her. Her responsibilities and roles grew with the company. Nowadays, she adds, she's not challenged at all by gender bias.

Interestingly, in her experience says LaPorte, the only people who treat women differently than they would men are customers. Expecting "big, strong men" to arrive on their move day, customers have been known to complain about the presence of female swamper, she says.

■ Choosing to Work in Moving

So, why did these women choose to stay in the moving industry?

They share some reasons for having done so. The day-to-day variety of responsibilities and challenges, the problem-solving, the people who work in moving ("salt of the earth," says Martin), the passion, camaraderie and team work are chief among the reasons they mention.

They also believe that women have particular aptitudes that make them valuable in the industry. "Moving is a very stressful process for people," points out LaPorte. "Women have a strong natural sense of compassion, which is very helpful when working with customers planning a move.” They’re good multi-taskers and have a high threshold for stress, adds Naylor. And they tend to be well-organized and willing, notes Shields.

While these are all important attributes for people who want to succeed in the moving industry, there are a good deal of others that are also useful. Self-motivation, innovation, flexibility, good communication, problem-solving and negotiation skills, patience, energy and the ability to work well under pressure are key skills at any level in the business.

Having worked so hard to be recognized for her skills, Naylor focuses on skills and passion when she’s hiring. “It doesn’t matter if the person is male or female; they have an equal shot here,” she says of her company. She surrounds herself with people she considers to have better skills and/or knowledge than she does to add depth to her management team.

LaPorte agrees. “It’s good to have a mix of men’s and women’s different skills,” she says. “I don’t understand why employers wouldn’t consider hiring women and men equally.”

■ Career Opportunities in the Industry

“Labour is a huge issue for movers,” says Shields. She cites insufficient recognition of the skill required to work at all levels in moving as a challenge for employers. Naylor notes that the industry’s efforts to fill jobs with workers from central and eastern Europe have been met with government red tape that has kept foreign workers out.

The labour shortage means that opportunities for career development are plentiful. Shields notes that many people start in entry-level positions and work their way up. “Skill development is very important in this industry,” she says, before noting that financial constraints limit the training opportunities available to many moving companies.

Cross-training is a solution, says Naylor, that helps employees build skills and understand more about the overall operation. With rogue movers – without costs for insurance, employee benefits and brick-and-mortar facilities – making it hard, she says, for some good companies to compete and remain viable, cross-training is a cost-effective remedy.

As a van line, says Martin, United offers career opportunities for men and women equally. Unlike a moving company, at which many jobs require physical strength, notes Martin, a van line’s administrative jobs suit anyone with appropriate skills. The company’s talent-management program provides training and mentoring to high-potential employees, with the result that good employees remain engaged with the company.

All of the women we spoke to for this article agree that competitive salaries and loads of opportunity make the moving industry a good choice for job seekers – men and women alike. And although the public may still perceive moving to be a man’s domain, the industry has become in recent years a much more welcoming place for women. ■

Le déménagement est-il encore l'affaire des hommes?

Par Kim Biggar

CET ARTICLE traite de quatre femmes qui se sont jointes à l'industrie du déménagement pour des motifs familiaux, dont certaines d'entre elles avec un peu de réticence. Quelle que soit la façon dont elles ont intégré l'industrie, elles y sont demeurées parce qu'elles adorent ce domaine et qu'elles y ont progressé en raison de leurs habiletés, connaissances et qualités de dirigeantes.

Faire partie d'une équipe de direction dans cette industrie est quelque peu inhabituel pour les femmes. Nous avons voulu savoir ce que les femmes considèrent comme essentiel afin de connaître du succès dans l'industrie du déménagement – car, après tout, ce domaine fut pratiquement un monde d'hommes pendant plusieurs années – mais, figurez-vous que leurs réponses sont assez typiques de ce que tous les intervenants de cette industrie diraient de nos jours.

Anne Martin, présidente de United Van Lines (Canada) Ltée, venait tout juste de revenir de Calgary à Toronto, nouvellement divorcée et accompagnée d'un bébé, lorsqu'elle a joint les rangs d'United dans le but initial de n'y demeurer que pour une année ou deux. Son père était alors à la tête de l'entreprise et ce, depuis

37 ans. Anne s'empresse de mentionner qu'elle était qualifiée pour le rôle de formatrice pour lequel elle avait été embauchée en raison de son expérience dans ce domaine. Plutôt que de quitter après un bref passage, elle a progressé en occupant des postes au niveau de la formation, du marketing, de la gestion de la qualité et de la gestion des comptes clients. En raison du fait qu'United n'est pas une entreprise familiale, Anne n'a jamais présumé qu'elle progresserait jusqu'à prendre la relève de son père au moment de sa retraite. En fait, bien qu'elle ait postulé pour l'emploi à ce moment-là, elle n'a pas été choisie. Deux ans plus tard, après le départ du remplaçant de son père, elle a de nouveau postulé pour le poste qui lui a finalement été octroyé.

Betty Shields est v.-p. chez Guy Moving & Storage Ltd. et Parkway Van Lines. (Les 2 entreprises sont la propriété de la famille Lyttle.) Elle a reçu une formation pour être enseignante tout en travaillant durant la période estivale pour la compagnie de déménagement de son défunt frère, Don Lyttle. Tout comme Anne Martin, elle ne planifiait pas de travailler dans l'industrie du déménagement et, lorsqu'elle s'est jointe à l'entreprise, Les femmes ont des aptitudes particulières qui en font de précieux actifs dans l'industrie.

Anne Martin, présidente de United Van Lines (Canada) Ltée

Betty Shields, v.-p., Guy Moving & Storage Ltd. et Parkway Van Lines

Brenda Naylor, propriétaire de T-R Westcan Inc./Tippet-Richardson

Carly LaPorte, directrice générale de LaPorte Moving & Storage Systems Limited

elle n'envisageait pas qu'elle ferait carrière dans ce domaine.

De façon similaire, Brenda Naylor, propriétaire de T-R Westcan Inc./Tippet-Richardson, a d'abord travaillé comme experte-conseil en environnement et est venue tout près de se joindre à l'académie de police juste au moment où son frère lui a demandé de le rejoindre au bureau de Vancouver de l'entreprise familiale fondée par son grand-père et son frère, Basil Tippet et C.A. Richardson. Si sa vision avait été meilleure, Brenda aurait été acceptée à l'académie et aurait assurément connu une toute autre carrière. Elle a repoussé les obstacles rencontrés chez T-R en étant la première femme à occuper le poste de directrice des opérations, puis de directrice générale et de vice-présidente jusqu'à son rôle actuel de présidente et chef de la direction.

Carly LaPorte, directrice générale de LaPorte Moving & Storage Systems Limited, est la seule parmi ces quatre femmes qui s'attendait à travailler dans le domaine du démé-nagement. En fait, elle débutât pour l'entreprise familiale établie par ses grands-parents alors qu'elle n'avait que 10 ans et n'a plus jamais travaillé ailleurs.

Pour Carly qui a toujours été encouragée à se joindre à l'entreprise familiale, le fait d'être une femme dans une industrie largement dominée par des hommes n'a jamais été un problème. Pour les autres cependant, le besoin de surmonter les préjugés sexistes était implicitement associé au travail. "Dans une industrie majoritairement dirigée par des hommes, je devais réussir à m'imposer," mentionne Anne Martin. Elle y a réussi en acquérant le plus d'expérience possible dans cette industrie, en participant à l'Association Canadienne des Déménageurs et au Canadian Employee Relocation Council, en élargissant ses réseaux de contacts et ses connaissances et en participant bénévolement à divers comités et projets. Le fait de voyager et d'être beaucoup vue a également été un élément de sa stratégie afin de se construire une solide réputation dans l'industrie.

Brenda Naylor dit qu'il lui a fallu beaucoup de temps pour être prise au sérieux par cette industrie. Non seulement était-elle "une femme dans un monde d'hommes", dit-elle, mais elle a également dû se battre contre la perception qu'on lui avait donné ces différents postes plutôt que de les avoir pleinement mérités. Elle "a dû redoubler d'efforts et de temps investi" pour éliminer cette perception et était rémunérée moins que des collègues à l'intérieur de l'entreprise, et ce, en dépit de ses antécédents familiaux. Brenda estime que l'industrie est toujours composée de 90 % d'hommes, bien qu'elle pense que ce pourcentage tend à diminuer. "Les femmes travaillant dans les secteurs des opérations et de la répartition doivent faire preuve de beaucoup de caractère", dit-elle, afin de contrer le préjugé persistant relativement aux femmes qui occupent de tels rôles.

Lorsque Betty Shields a commenté dans l'industrie, elle était l'une des rares femmes dans sa compagnie.

Tandis que nous allons de l'avant, je suis vraiment enthousiaste et je suis persuadé que nous bénéficierons tous de la croissance et de la prospérité de notre Association. Encore plus important, je souhaite vous entendre relativement à vos attentes et aux nouvelles orientations que vous souhaiteriez nous voir prendre. N'hésitez pas à m'en faire part!

Paul Leader, Président & CEO

Bien que consciente de l'orientation fortement axée sur les hommes de l'industrie du déménagement à ce moment-là, cette situation ne l'a pas affecté directement. Ses responsabilités et ses différents rôles se sont accrus dans l'entreprise. De nos jours, ajoute-t-elle, elle n'est plus confrontée du tout à cette forme de sexisme.

Fait intéressant, selon son expérience, mentionne Carly LaPorte, les seules personnes qui traitent les femmes différemment qu'elles ne le devraient sont les clients. S'attendant à voir arriver "des hommes imposants et forts" le jour de leur déménagement, des clients se sont parfois plaints de la présence de femmes parmi les employés, dit-elle.

■ Faire le choix de travailler dans le domaine du déménagement

Alors, pourquoi ces femmes ont-elles choisi de demeurer dans l'industrie du déménagement?

Elles partagent certaines raisons pour y être demeurées. La variété de responsabilités et de défis au quotidien, la résolution de problèmes, les gens qui travaillent dans l'industrie du déménagement ("le sel de la terre," mentionne Anne Martin), la passion, la camaraderie et le travail d'équipe sont parmi les principales raisons qu'elles avancent.

Elles croient également que les femmes ont des aptitudes particulières qui en font de précieux actifs dans l'industrie. "Un déménagement est un processus des plus stressants pour les gens," fait remarquer Carly LaPorte. "Les femmes possèdent un sentiment de compassion marqué, ce qui est très utile lorsque vous travaillez avec des clients qui planifient un déménagement." Elles sont excellentes dans la multiplicité des tâches et ont un seuil de tolérance élevé face au stress, ajoute Brenda Naylor, et elles sont enclines à être bien organisées et très disponibles, note Betty Shields.

Bien que ce soient tous des attributs importants pour les personnes désirant connaître du succès dans l'industrie du déménagement, il y en a beaucoup d'autres qui sont également utiles. L'automotivation, l'innovation, la flexibilité, une bonne communication, des habiletés pour la résolution de problèmes et la négociation, de la patience, de l'énergie ainsi que la capacité de bien travailler sous pression sont des habiletés clés utiles à tous les niveaux d'une entreprise.

Ayant autant travaillé dans le but d'être reconnue pour ses aptitudes, Brenda Naylor s'attarde aux habiletés et à la passion lorsqu'elle procède à une embauche. "Ce n'est pas important qu'il s'agisse d'un homme ou d'une femme; ils sont égaux chez nous," dit-elle en parlant de son entreprise. Elle s'entoure de personnes qui semblent avoir de meilleures habiletés et/ou connaissances qu'elle afin d'ajouter de la profondeur à son équipe de gestion.

Carly LaPorte est d'accord avec elle. "C'est une bonne chose d'avoir un amalgame des aptitudes variées des hommes et des femmes", dit-elle. "Je ne comprends pas pourquoi les employeurs ne considèreraient pas d'embaucher de manière égale des femmes et des hommes."

■ Opportunités de carrière dans l'industrie

"La main d'œuvre est une grande problématique pour les déménageurs," mentionne Betty Shields. Elle cite la reconnaissance insuffisante de l'aptitude requise pour travailler à tous les niveaux du déménagement comme un des défis des employeurs. Brenda Naylor note également que les efforts faits par l'industrie pour combler les emplois disponibles avec des travailleurs en provenance d'Europe centrale et d'Europe de l'Est se sont butés aux tracasseries administratives du gouvernement qui ont restreint la main d'œuvre étrangère.

La pénurie de main d'œuvre implique que les opportunités de développement de carrière sont nombreuses. Betty Shields indique que plusieurs personnes commencent dans des postes de niveau débutant et progressent. "Le développement des compétences est un élément très important dans cette industrie," dit-elle, avant de mentionner que des contraintes financières restreignent les opportunités de formation dans plusieurs compagnies de déménagement.

Les programmes de formation croisée sont une solution, indique Brenda Naylor, qui aide les employés à développer leurs habiletés et à comprendre mieux les opérations en général. Elle mentionne aussi qu'en raison de la présence de déménageurs malhonnêtes – sans coûts d'assurance, sans bénéfices pour les employés et sans installations en bonne et due forme – qui contribuent à créer un environnement difficile pour que les entreprises honnêtes puissent demeurer compétitives et viables, la formation croisée s'avère être une solution rentable pour celles-ci.

Comme compagnie de transport, mentionne Anne Martin, United offre des opportunités de carrière égales aux hommes et aux femmes. À la différence d'une compagnie de déménagement dans laquelle plusieurs emplois requièrent une force physique, dit-elle, les emplois administratifs d'une entreprise de transport conviennent à tous ceux et celles qui possèdent les aptitudes requises. Le programme de gestion des talents de l'entreprise fournit la formation et le mentorat nécessaires aux employés présentant un haut potentiel, avec le résultat que les bons employés demeurent au sein de la compagnie.

Toutes les femmes auxquelles nous avons parlé dans le cadre de cet article sont d'accord pour dire que des salaires compétitifs et un grand nombre d'opportunités rendent attrayante l'Industrie du déménagement aux yeux des chercheurs d'emploi – autant les hommes que les femmes. Et bien que le public puisse encore percevoir le monde du déménagement comme un domaine réservé aux hommes, l'industrie est devenue, au cours des dernières années, beaucoup plus accueillante envers les femmes. ■

Matco Moving Solutions: A Household Goods Provider in Western and Northern Canada

By Kim Biggar

IN 2016, Matco Moving Solutions will celebrate its 50th anniversary. Like anything that's 50 years old, the company has gone through some changes.

VP and General Manager Wayne Wishloff has been with Matco for 29 years, and is now responsible for the day-to-day operations of the company. As a long-time employee, he has seen many of the changes that Matco has gone through, perhaps the most significant of which was the 2013 purchase of the company by Manitoulin Transport. (Several months after its purchase, on January 1, 2014, Manitoulin changed the company name from MATCO Transportation Systems to Matco Moving Solutions.) Ray Anderson, who co-founded MATCO in 1966, told NWT News/North at the time of the sale that he and his brother Lloyd entered discussions with Manitoulin because of its “respectable and responsible reputation and its status as a family-owned company.” They sold the company with the same care they had applied to its operations for more than 45 years. Wishloff and other senior managers stayed on to run the company, which has carried on under the Matco name, thanks to the strength of its brand and its dedicated employees.

Matco's future will look much different than its past. Technology and the company's ability to secure future employees will be the key to its success.

■ Company History and Overview

Lloyd and Ray Anderson and their brother-in-law Lee Wark incorporated Mid-Arctic Transportation Company (MATCO) in May 1966 in Norman Wells, NWT, after five years of hauling freight to that community. Seeing an opportunity, the company purchased trailers and equipment, and built warehouses to service oil and gas exploration sites in the north. At that time, according to Lloyd, a few trucks and taxis comprised the land-transportation vehicles – other than dog sleds – in Inuvik, north of the Arctic Circle. In 1967, MATCO opened a branch in Inuvik to serve its fairly transient population.

One of the company's largest customers at that time was CFB Inuvik. Because there were no roads then into Inuvik, freight was moved by air to and from Edmonton. For the base, MATCO mostly moved boxes with clothes and other personal belongings; base personnel lived in fully furnished and outfitted accommodations.

With the opening of the Dempster Highway in 1979, MATCO began to move most of its freight and household goods to Inuvik by truck. It continues to also serve remote northern locations without road access, in partnership with Northern Airlines.

After opening branches in Fort Smith, NWT in 1970 and Edmonton, Alta. in 1973 (Edmonton is now its head office), MATCO entered the moving business, joining United Van Lines in 1974. The company has since opened branches in Hay River, Calgary, Yellowknife, Whitehorse and Fort McMurray, representing and/or providing services for all three major van lines in Canada. It opened its international and commercial divisions in 2000.

Matco shared its stories about ice roads and servicing household-goods relocations in the far north in episodes of History Channel's Ice Road Truckers and Ice Pilots, NWT.

■ Matco As It Nears 50

According to Wishloff, Matco's future will look much different than its past. Technology and the company's ability to secure future employees will be the key, he figures, to its success. He anticipates that enabling employees to work remotely and making use of new technologies to streamline the company's very heavy administrative processes will provide benefits in the future.

With the peak of its activity between May and September, Matco has put a training program in place to help integrate student labour into its existing operations. The company offers incentives to those students that work the entire peak season. It is also exploring the possibility of implementing a tuition program to further boost its success in attracting good student workers.

Servicing western and northern Canada for the past 49 years has certainly provided some interesting and challenging relocations. With ice roads, rugged terrain and vast distances, Wishloff believes that the challenges employees have overcome have made them – and the company – better, more attentive to detail. As with anything, he points out, if you have to work hard at it, you tend to get good at it. ■

Last but not least the transition of the presidency from John Levi to Paul Leader has gone smoothly. Paul brings new attributes to the Association that will help us to continue the growth that John commenced.

Matco Moving Solutions : Fournisseur de services de déménagement de biens ménagères pour l'Ouest et le Nord du Canada

Par Kim Biggar

EN 2016, Matco Moving Solutions célébrera son cinquantième anniversaire. Et au cours de ces cinquante années, l'entreprise a connu plusieurs changements.

De g. à dr. : les fondateurs de l'entreprise, Ray Anderson, Lloyd Anderson, Lee Wark

Le futur de Matco sera bien différent de ce que l'entreprise a connu par le passé. La technologie ainsi que la capacité de la compagnie à intéresser ses futurs employés seront les clés de son succès.

Son vice-président et directeur-général, Wayne Wishloff, est avec Matco depuis 29 ans et il est aujourd'hui responsable des opérations quotidiennes de l'entreprise. En raison de son ancienneté, il a vécu de près les nombreux changements survenus chez Matco, dont le plus significatif est peut-être l'acquisition de l'entreprise par Manitoulin Transport en 2013. (Plusieurs mois après son acquisition, le 1^{er} janvier 2014, Manitoulin changeait le nom de MATCO Transportation Systems à celui de Matco Moving Solutions.) Au moment de la vente, Ray Anderson, cofondateur de MATCO en 1966, a mentionné à NWT News/North que lui et son frère Lloyd entreprirent alors les discussions avec Manitoulin en raison de «sa réputation respectable et responsable ainsi que de son statut d'entreprise familiale.» Ils ont vendu l'entreprise avec le même soin qu'ils ont apporté à la gestion des opérations pendant plus de 45 ans. Wishloff et les autres dirigeants principaux sont demeurés en place afin de diriger la compagnie sous le nom Matco en raison de la renommée de cette marque et grâce à ses dévoués employés.

■ Historique et aperçu de l'entreprise

Lloyd et Ray Anderson ainsi que leur beau-frère, Lee Wark, ont procédé à l'incorporation de Mid-Arctic Transportation Company (MATCO) au mois de mai 1966 à Norman Wells, T. N.-O., après cinq années de transport de marchandises dans cette communauté. Voyant là une opportunité, la compagnie fit l'acquisition de remorques et d'équipement tout en construisant des entrepôts pour assurer le service requis par l'industrie de l'exploitation des ressources en pétrole et en gaz au Nord. À ce moment-là, selon Lloyd, la flotte de véhicules pour le transport terrestre était composée de quelques camions et taxis – autres que des traîneaux à chiens – que l'on retrouvait à Inuvik, au nord du cercle arctique. En 1967, MATCO ouvrait une succursale à Inuvik afin de desservir sa population relativement mobile.

Un des plus importants clients de la compagnie était alors BFC Inuvik. En raison du fait qu'il n'y avait alors aucunes routes dans Inuvik, le matériel était transporté par voie aérienne à destination ou au départ d'Edmonton. Pour cette base, MATCO déménageait principalement des boîtes contenant des vêtements et des objets personnels de tout genre; le personnel de la base y vivait dans des résidences entièrement équipées et meublées.

Avec l'ouverture de l'autoroute Dempster en 1979, MATCO commença à transporter la grande majorité de son fret et des biens ménagers à Inuvik par camion. Elle continuait également à desservir les régions éloignées au nord ne bénéficiant pas d'accès routier en partenariat avec Northern Airlines.

Après l'ouverture d'autres succursales à Fort Smith, T. N.-O., en 1970 et à Edmonton, Alberta, en 1973 (Edmonton en est maintenant le bureau-chef), MATCO fit ses débuts dans l'industrie du déménagement en se joignant à United Van Lines en 1974. Depuis ce temps, l'entreprise a ouvert des succursales à Hay River, Calgary, Yellowknife, Whitehorse et Fort McMurray, tout en représentant et/ou en assurant les services fournis par les trois principales compagnies de transport au Canada. Elle a par la suite inauguré ses divisions commerciales et internationales au cours de l'année 2000.

Matco a déjà partagé ses expériences passées à propos des routes glacées et du service effectué pour le déplacement des biens ménagers dans le Grand Nord dans le cadre de quelques épisodes des séries télévisées Ice Road Truckers et Ice Pilots, NWT sur History Channel.

■ Matco à l'approche de ses 50 ans

Selon Wishloff, le futur de Matco sera bien différent que ce de l'entreprise a connu par le passé. Selon lui, la technologie ainsi que la capacité de la compagnie à intéresser ses futurs employés seront les clés de son succès. Il anticipe que la possibilité de permettre aux employés de travailler à distance et d'utiliser de nouvelles technologies dans le but de simplifier les lourds processus administratifs de la compagnie apporteront des bénéfices significatifs dans le futur.

En raison de la période de pointe de l'entreprise entre les mois de mai et septembre, Matco a implanté un programme de formation afin de faciliter l'intégration de la main d'œuvre étudiante dans ses opérations courantes. La compagnie offre des incitatifs aux étudiants qui travaillent durant toute la haute saison. Elle explore également la possibilité d'implanter un programme de bourses d'études afin de connaître encore plus de succès dans l'acquisition d'une main d'œuvre étudiante de qualité.

Le fait de desservir l'Ouest canadien et le Nord du Canada au cours des 49 dernières années a assurément impliqué plusieurs déménagements à la fois intéressants et exigeants. Face à des routes glacées, un terrain accidenté et de longues distances à parcourir, Wishloff croit que les défis surmontés par ses employés les ont rendus – eux et l'entreprise – encore meilleurs et plus attentifs aux détails. Dans ce domaine comme dans d'autres, mentionne-t-il, si vous devez investir beaucoup d'efforts dans votre travail, vous n'en serez que meilleur.■

De g. à dr. : les employés du siège social, Chris Semenuk, Mark Meikle, Alaeshia Scott, Leon Johnson, Wayne Wishloff et Marcy Anderson ont amassé 500$ en participant au Ice Bucket Challenge 2014 de la SLA.

Advancing the Year of the Reputable Mover Agenda

Ontario Minister to Headline at Annual Conference

ON A REGULAR BASIS, consumers are being scammed, extorted, defrauded, robbed and cheated by rogue operators appearing as legitimate movers and there is little being done to remedy the situation.

Early last year, the Canadian Association of Movers (CAM) declared 2014 to be the Year of the Reputable Mover. Our focus was on promoting quality services in our household goods moving industry and reducing the detrimental effects that the underground rogue businesses passing as professional movers was having on consumers, the moving industry and all taxpayers.

By the close of 2014, we knew that our agenda for the Year of the Reputable Mover was going to take many more years to address.

One of our strategies last year was to try to engage federal and provincial government offices and agencies in a dialogue on how to protect Canadian consumers from the harm being done to them by these rogue moving companies. In January 2014, we wrote on behalf of CAM's members to ministries in all provinces that were responsible for industry, justice, consumer affairs, transportation and taxation, as well as the agencies responsible for workers' compensation. We expressed concerns about the state of our industry in Canada and the harm being done to Canadian consumers.

We expressed our concerns about the consumers' complaints about companies that we receive every day – complaints that include:

- bmarketing to consumers through untraceable locations, such as the internet and want-ads
- providing fraudulent estimates by offering impossibly low prices for moving services and then extorting higher payments from consumers at the time of delivery of their household goods
- foregoing payment of sales tax (PST, GST, HST) in exchange for cash payment
- providing substandard services with untrained workers and unsuitable equipment
- providing no or fraudulent documentation – no or falsified weigh scale tickets when the move is sold on a by-weight basis; no or altered bills of lading; no or inadequate insurance coverage; no receipts or invoices
- requiring that the consumer pay for the move in cash even though a credit card payment option had been advertised
- threatening consumers with dumping or seizing their property as they present their inflated bills
- damaging and losing (even stealing) consumers goods, and
- disappearing after the move when the consumer tries to file a claim or complain.

Legislation already exists that governs various aspects of these kinds of complaints. However, in most provinces, the only legislation that applies specifically to movers is found in the conditions-of-carriage regulations that are appended to provincial motor vehicle legislation. There is also legislation that applies in various provincial consumer affairs legislation, taxation regulations, worker's compensation rules, etc. The Criminal Code of Canada deals with various offenses related to issuing fraudulent contracts, extortion, threatening and fraud, to mention a few.

CAM's position has been that there is sufficient legislation and regulation in place. Simply, however, it must be enforced in the manner it was intended to protect consumers.

The media – newspapers, radio and TV – have been very enthusiastic in covering moving-related incidents but these events have very short life in the news. Several of CAM's directors have been interviewed, some frequently. This seems to help but consumers only seem to be aware of the problem when it happens to them.

Canadians move from coast to coast. The problems they encounter with rogue businesses therefore can be multi-jurisdictional. Since most governing legislation is provincial, consumers are forced to search for a resolution in a maze of jurisdictions.

In the more serious instances, consumers have contacted the police to solicit help. The police typically indicate that the problem is a civil matter and not in their jurisdiction. In fact, CAM has been in contact with the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police who expressed the same opinion – "It's a civil matter!" We do recognize that this is a complex problem and that it's difficult for the individual police officer to distinguish between a criminal matter, a civil matter and a reputable mover simply asking for a proper and fair payment.

Our agenda for "Year of the Reputable Mover" will take many more years to address.

We also hear about instances where taxes are not being paid and fees are not being paid to the respective workers compensation board for work performed. Uninsured workers put the consumer at financial risk should an injury occur.

Overall, we received a few positive responses and a few recommendations for actions. However, ministries generally indicated that this problem was the responsibility of some other ministry.

We sent a second round of letters to various federal and provincial ministries and agencies in September 2014, to provide them with a status report on CAM's efforts and to ask for a primary contact person to engage in a future dialogue. The response was fairly good, although, again, several ministries referred the issue to a colleague ministry.

So far, CAM has had the best response from Ontario.

In 2014, during Ontario's last provincial election, Premier Kathleen Wynne made a promise to get tough on rogue moving companies. In mid-December, CAM's retiring and incoming Presidents met with representatives from the Ontario Ministry of Government and Consumer Services to follow up on the Premier's promise, establish a dialogue and agree to future meetings. This was a great first step.

In late January 2015, CAM's President again met with Ontario Ministry representatives. The meeting established some guidelines to enhance data-sharing between CAM and the Ontario Government. The Ministry decided to hire a consultant, Prism Economics and Analysis (Prism), to develop a comprehensive profile of the household goods moving sector in Ontario. It was agreed that a survey of moving companies across Ontario would be conducted and CAM is playing an important role in this research. In February, we circulated the survey to our entire mover membership (beyond just to members in Ontario) to help augment the Ministry's subject pool. Prism advised that the response from

Paul Leader, President & CEO

Avancement de l'agenda de l'Année du déménageur reconnu

Un ministre de l'Ontario, tête d'affiche de la Conférence annuelle

SUR UNE BASE RÉGULIÈRE, des consommateurs sont victimes d'arnaques, d'extorsions, de fraudes, de vols, ou encore, se font flouer par des exploitants frauduleux s'affichant comme des déménageurs légitimes et trop peu d'efforts sont faits pour tenter de remédier à cette situation.

Au début de la dernière année, l'Association Canadienne des Déménageurs (ACD) a proclamé l'année 2014 comme étant l'Année du déménageur reconnu. Nous nous sommes efforcés de faire la promotion de la qualité des services que l'on retrouve dans l'industrie du déménagement de biens ménagers et de restreindre les effets néfastes sur les consommateurs, l'industrie du déménagement et tous les contribuables qu'ont les entreprises souterraines et frauduleuses qui se font passer pour des déménageurs professionnels.

À la fin de 2014, nous savions déjà que notre agenda relatif à l'Année du déménageur reconnu devrait aborder cette problématique pendant plusieurs autres années.

Une de nos stratégies de la dernière année fut de tenter d'impliquer activement les agences et organismes gouvernementaux dans un dialogue permettant de cerner des pistes de solution afin de protéger les consommateurs canadiens contre les méfaits causés par ces compagnies frauduleuses. En janvier 2014, nous avons communiqué, au nom de tous les membres de l'ACD, avec l'ensemble des ministères provinciaux responsables de l'industrie, de la justice, de la protection des consommateurs, du transport et des finances ainsi qu'avec les agences responsables de la santé et de la sécurité des travailleurs. Nous avons alors exprimé nos craintes quant à la situation prévalant dans notre industrie au Canada ainsi qu'aux dommages que subissaient les consommateurs canadiens.

Nous avons alors communiqué nos soucis relativement aux plaintes quotidiennes que nous recevions de la part des consommateurs à propos de telles compagnies – plaintes qui incluent :

- le marketing fait sur l'Internet et dans les petites annonces à partir d'emplacements introuvables
- la fourniture de soumissions frauduleuses en offrant des bas prix pour des services de déménagement pour ensuite extorquer des paiements plus élevés aux consommateurs lors de la livraison de leurs biens
- non-paiement des taxes de vente (TVP, TPS, TVH) en échange de paiements en espèces
- la fourniture de services en deçà des normes par des travailleurs non formés et avec de l'équipement inadéquat
- ne pas fournir ou fournir de la documentation frauduleuse – absence ou fourniture de bordereaux de pesée falsifiés lorsque les déménagements sont vendus sur la base du poids des marchandises; absence ou fourniture

de connaissances altérés; pas de couverture d'assurance ou couverture inadéquate; aucun reçu ou facture

- exiger que le consommateur paie le déménagement en espèces bien que l'option de paiement par carte de crédit ait été publicisée
- menacer les consommateurs de décharger ou de saisir leurs biens au moment de présenter des factures gonflées
- endommager et perdre (même voler) des biens de consommation, et
- disparaître après le déménagement alors que le consommateur essaie de remplir une réclamation ou une plainte.

Il existe une réglementation qui régit les divers aspects de ces types de plaintes. Cependant, dans la plupart des provinces, la seule législation s'appliquant spécifiquement aux déménageurs se retrouve dans la réglementation des conditions de transport figurant dans les annexes de la loi provinciale régissant les véhicules moteurs. On retrouve également diverses législations provinciales relativement à la protection du consommateur, aux réglementations sur les impôts, aux règles de santé et sécurité des travailleurs, et autres. Le Code Criminel du Canada traite des différentes infractions relatives à l'émission de contrats frauduleux, à l'extorsion, aux menaces et aux fraudes, pour n'en citer que quelques-unes.

Notre agenda relatif à « l'Année du déménageur reconnu » devrait aborder cette problématique pendant plusieurs autres années.

L'ACD a toujours estimé qu'il existait suffisamment de législations et de réglementations adéquates. Il faudrait simplement que celles-ci soient appliquées de la façon prévue afin de bien protéger les consommateurs.

Les médias – journaux, radio et télé – ont démontré de l'enthousiasme en couvrant des incidents liés au déménagement, mais ces événements ont toujours bénéficié d'une brève présence dans les nouvelles. Plusieurs directeurs de l'ACD ont été interviewés, dont certains fréquemment. Ces éléments semblent aider quelque peu, mais les consommateurs ne semblent être sensibles à ce problème que lorsqu'eux-mêmes doivent y faire face.

Les canadiens déménagent d'un océan à l'autre. Les problèmes auxquels ils sont confrontés avec les compagnies frauduleuses peuvent par conséquent être soumis à plusieurs juridictions. Puisque la plupart des réglementations relèvent du provincial, les consommateurs sont alors obligés de tenter de résoudre un tel problème dans un labyrinthe complexe de juridictions.

Dans les cas les plus sérieux, des consommateurs ont communiqué avec le service de police afin de requérir leur aide. Les policiers, typiquement, mentionnent que cette situation relève du droit civil et non de leur juridiction. En fait, l'ACD a communiqué avec l'Association des chefs de police qui ont exprimé la même opinion – « C'est de juridiction civile! ». Nous reconnaissons volontiers qu'il s'agit d'un problème fort complexe et qu'il est très difficile pour un policier de faire la distinction entre un acte criminel, une affaire civile et un déménageur professionnel demandant simplement de recevoir un paiement juste et approprié.

Nous prenons également connaissance de situations pour lesquelles les taxes ne sont pas payées et les cotisations requises ne sont pas remises aux diverses Commissions des accidents du travail pour le travail d'employés rémunérés. Des travailleurs non couverts peuvent générer de sérieux risques financiers pour le consommateur dans l'éventualité d'une blessure.

Dans l'ensemble, nous avons reçu quelques réponses positives et quelques recommandations en vue d'actions spécifiques. Cependant, les ministères nous indiquent habituellement que ce problème est du ressort d'un autre ministère.

Au mois de septembre 2014, nous avons procédé à un deuxième envoi de lettres adressées à divers ministères et agences du fédéral et des provinces afin de leur fournir un rapport de situation sur les efforts mis de l'avant par l'ACD ainsi que pour leur demander d'identifier une personne responsable avec qui nous pourrions initier un dialogue. Les réponses ont été généralement bonnes, bien qu'encore une fois, plusieurs ministères se renvoyaient la balle en termes de responsabilité.

Jusqu'à maintenant, c'est de l'Ontario que l'ACD a reçu la meilleure réponse.

En 2014, lors des dernières élections provinciales en Ontario, la première ministre Kathleen Wynne a fait la promesse de resserrer les règles face aux compagnies de déménagement frauduleuses. Vers la mi-décembre, le président sortant ainsi que le nouveau président de l'ACD ont rencontré des représentants du Ministère des services gouvernementaux et des services aux consommateurs de l'Ontario dans le but de faire le suivi relativement à la promesse de la première ministre d'établir un dialogue et de prendre entente pour les rencontres subséquentes. Il s'agissait alors d'une première étape importante.

Vers la fin janvier 2015, le président de l'ACD a de nouveau rencontré les représentants de ce ministère. La rencontre servit à établir certaines lignes directrices permettant d'améliorer le partage de données entre l'ACD et le gouvernement de l'Ontario. Le ministère décida alors de mandater une firme d'experts-conseils, Prism Economics and Analysis (Prism), afin de développer un profil complet du secteur du déménagement des biens ménagers en Ontario. Il a alors été entendu qu'un sondage serait mené auprès des compagnies de déménagement en opération partout en Ontario et l'ACD tient un rôle important dans le cadre de cette recherche. En février, nous avons fait circuler le sondage parmi tous les membres de l'Association (et non seulement aux membres de l'Ontario) afin de permettre au ministère d'augmenter le bassin de participants. Prism a fait savoir que le taux de réponse des membres de l'ACD était excessivement bon, ce qui a permis grandement d'étayer les résultats du sondage de l'industrie.

Prism a également effectué un sondage d'opinion auprès des consommateurs relativement à l'utilisation d'une compagnie de déménagement ainsi qu'au niveau de satisfaction rencontré à l'égard de leur processus de déménagement. Prism s'efforce actuellement de compiler tous les résultats de ces sondages pour le gouvernement de l'Ontario. L'ACD prévoit partager ces résultats avec ses membres dès qu'ils seront disponibles.

Le ministère planifie d'utiliser ces résultats afin d'améliorer l'éducation et la protection des consommateurs en Ontario. Leurs stratégies afin de débarrasser le Canada de ces éléments nocifs pour notre industrie pourraient très bien servir de modèle pour les autres provinces!

Une autre importante étape a été réalisée avec l'honorable David Oraziotti, Ministre des services gouvernementaux et des services aux consommateurs de l'Ontario, qui a accepté d'agir à titre de conférencier invité lors de notre conférence annuelle du 2 novembre 2015 à Ottawa. Le Ministre partagera les plans de son ministère qui permettront de mieux protéger les consommateurs dans le cadre du déménagement de leurs biens ménagers.

Le fait de travailler de près avec nos partenaires gouvernementaux peut amener des résultats tangibles. Ensemble, nous pouvons éliminer les activités de ces déménageurs frauduleux qui portent préjudice aux consommateurs de toutes les provinces et ce, dans l'ensemble du pays.■

CAM members was extremely good which helped greatly to strengthen the survey results for the industry.

Prism also conducted a general opinion survey among consumers about using a moving company and their level of satisfaction with their moving process. Prism is now compiling all of the results of the surveys for the Ontario Government. CAM plans to share those results with members when they are made available.

The Ministry plans to use the results to improve consumer education and consumer protection in Ontario. Their strategies towards ridding Canada of the rogue element in our industry may very well become a blueprint for other provinces!

Another great step has been taken by the Honourable David Oraziotti, Minister of Ontario's Government and Consumer Services Ministry, who has agreed to be the keynote speaker at our annual conference in Ottawa on November 2, 2015. The Minister will share his Ministry's plans for better protecting consumers in their household-goods move.

Working with our Government partners can show tangible results. Together, we can eliminate those activities of rogue movers that harm consumers in all provinces and across the country.■

2015 Annual Conference

Sunday, November 1, 2015 (5:00 pm)

– Tuesday, November 3, 2015 (Noon)

Ottawa Marriott Hotel, 100 Kent Street, Ottawa, Ontario

The Canadian Association of Movers (CAM) invites you to join us at our 2015 Annual Conference where our Canadian moving industry will come together to network, attend business sessions and honour colleagues.

This is CAM's 20th annual conference. In celebration of this milestone, the conference will be held in Ottawa, Canada's capital, where attendees can also visit Canada's Parliament Buildings, the Rideau Canal and the National Gallery of Canada nearby.

CAM will be offering a memorable program that brings a variety of professionals in the industry together – from government, the marketplace and the trucking industry – to present their views on the challenges faced by and the future of our industry:

- The Ontario Minister of Government and Consumer Services will kick off the conference with a few remarks about residential household goods moving and consumer protection.
- The President and CEO of the Canadian Trucking Alliance will speak on the challenges faced by and the future of the transportation industry.

- A consultant on group benefits will discuss the need for moving companies to offer their employees retirement benefits programs.

- A specialist on workplace safety will present on workplace health and safety, worker's compensation and how to reduce premiums.

- A representative from the Interdepartmental Committee of Public Works & Government Services Canada will comment on the 2014 contract experience and give a future outlook on the process.

Attendees will have plenty of opportunity to network with each other – to share ideas on new directions, changes and challenges in the moving industry. On Sunday evening, CAM will host an informal reception for attendees to mingle and compare experiences. The business sessions will run from Monday morning to noon on Tuesday with lots of breaks in-between so colleagues can connect. The trade show, which runs at the same time as the sessions, is a particularly popular event where leading industry suppliers showcase their products and services. On Monday evening, CAM will honour distinguished members in the industry at its very popular Annual Awards Dinner.

More information

- Nominations are open for CAM's awards; forms can be obtained from <http://www.mover.net/movers/about/awards.htm>.
- Updates about the conference are being issued regularly. Watch for the detailed conference flyer and registration form that will be distributed shortly.
- The hotel is already accepting registrations at the special room rate for the "Canadian Association of Movers conference". Call 1-800-853-8463 or visit <https://resweb.passkey.com/go/CAMNov2015> to book online.
- Opportunities to sponsor segments of the conference are available, to promote your company.
- Bring your family and see all that Ottawa has to offer visitors.
